[By John R. Thompson.] We could not pause, while yet the mountide sir a Shook with the cannonade's incessant pealing, The funeral pageant fitly to prepare—
A nation's grief revealing.

The smoke, above the glimmering woodland wide.
That skirts our southward border, in its beauty,
Marked where our heroes stood and fought and died.
For love and faith and duty,

And still, what time the doubtful strife went on.
We might not find expression for our sorrow;
We could but lay our dear, dumb warrior down,
And gird us for to-merrow.

One weary year agone, when came a lull, With victory, in the conflict victormy closes— When the glad spring, all flushed and beautiful, 'First mocked us with her roses.

With dirge, and bell, and minute gun, we paid Some few poor rites—an expressive token Of a great people's pain—to Jackson's shade, In agony unspoken.

No wailing trumpet and no tolling bell, No cannon save the battle's boom recedin When Stuart to the grave we bore might tell With hearts all crushed and bleeding.

The crisis suited not with pomp, and she Whose angulsh bears the seal of consecration Had wished his Christian obsequies should be Thus void of ostentation. Only the maidens came sweet flowers to twine Above his form so still and cold and painless, Whose deeds upon our brightest record shine— Whose life and sword are stainless.

They well romembered how he loved to dash Into the fight, festooned from summer bowers; How like a fountain's sprays his sabre's flash Leaped from a mass of flowers.

And so we carried to his place of rest All that of our great Paladin was mortal; the cross, and not the sabre, on his breast,

That opes the heavenly portal. No more of tribute might to us remain-But there will come a time when Freedom's ma tyrs A richer guerdon of renown shall gain, Than gleams in stars and garters.

I claim no prophet's vision, but I see Through coming years—now near at hand, now distant—
My rescued country glorious and free,
And strong and self-existent.

I hear from out that sun-lit land, which lies Beyond these clouds that gather darkly o'er us, The happy sounds of industry arise In swelling, peaceful chorus. And, mingling with these sounds, the glad acclaim Of millions, undisturbed by war's afflictions, Crowning each martyr's never-dying name With grateful benedictions.

in some fair future garden of delights. Where flowers shall bloom and song-birds sweetly warble, Art shall erect the statues of our knights In living bronze and marble.

And none of all that bright and heroic throng Shall wear to far-off time a semblance grander— shall still be decked with fresher wreaths of song-Than this beloved commander. The Spanish legend tells us of the Cid, That after death he rode erect, sedately, Along his lines, even as in life he did,

In presence yet more stately. And thus our Stuart at this moment seems To ride out of our dark and troubled story

Into the region of romance and dreams, A realm of light and glory. And sometimes, when the silver bugles blow, That ghostly form, in battle reappearing, Shall lead his horsemen headlong on the foe,

In victory careering.

THE LATE PRINTING CONTEST-DECISION OF THE BOARD OF APPEAL .- The following correspondence and decision of the Board of Appeal in relation to the State printing, which has been furnished R. F. Walker. Superintendent of Public Printing, will explain itself:

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA,) EXECUTIVE CHAMBERS, RICHMOND, May 9, 1876. Mr. F. A. Christian; Dear Sir,-I enclose the decision of the Board of Appeal and also your accepted order on Messrs. Smith & Rady.

The Superintendent of Public Printing has been furnished with a duplicate of the decision. Hoping that you may win credit and profit from your undertaking, I am Very respectfully, &c JAMES MCDONALD, Secretary of Commonwealth.

The undersigned, acting as a Board of Appeal under section 9, chapter 95, Acts of 1873-'3, having had laid before them the appeal of Mr. F. A. Christian from the award of contracts for State printing made by the Superintendent of Public Printing April 1, 1876, and having heard testimony and the arguments of counsel, by which it was

1. That Mr. Christian was the lowest bid-2. That he had had practice and expe-to do, and possessed well-attested capacity and skill for it. 3. That he was a man of unimpeachable character and good business habits. 4. That he had the guarantee of a compe tent and responsible business firm of the city that he should be furnished with an ample supply of types, presses, and other material necessary to enable him to do promptly and in workmanlike style all the work he might be required to do-Are of opinion that the contract for doing such and so much of the printing for the State as he, the said Christian, submitted proposals for should have been awarded to him, and they decide that it be now- so The undersigned are furthermore of opina reasonable time-say twenty days-within and security required by law. J. L. KEMPER,

THE GATHERING TO-DAY-SOME STATISTICS OF THE DENOMINATION-HISTORY OF THE CONVENTION-LIST OF DELEGATES IN

MORNING, &c., &c.

The Baptists of the South are now gathering, by their delegates, in our city in the annual session of their Convention. The Convention will be composed of an array of native talent, scholarship, zeal, piety, devotion, and popular speaking- and preachingpower which would attract attention and excite interest anywhere. But the meeting will derive additional interest from the fact that the Convention represents one of the largest and most influential of our Christian denominations.

The following interesting STATISTICS may be of general interest. The reports for the year 1875 show that in the United States there are of regular missionary Baptists 925 associations, 21,255 churches, 13,117 ordained ministers, and 1,815,300 members, and that 87,874 were baptized into the fellowship of the churches during the year. They have, so far as reported (the actual number is much larger), 9, 233 Sunday schools, 88,495 officers and teachers, and 683,319 scholars. They contributed last year to general benevolence (exclusive of pastoral support and home expenses) $4,002,834.45-a much larger sum contributed. The denomination has nine theological seminaries, thirty-three male colleges and universities, and thirty-eight female colleges and institutes. It has forty-nine periodicals to promote its interests. The territory of the Southern Baptist Convention contains largely over one half of

The following brief

SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF THE CONVENTION will be appropriate to-day: Up to 1845 the Baptists of the South acted with the Baptists of the North in what was known as the old "Triennial Convention," which had for its object the prosecution of missions at home and abroad. There had been for several years serious disturbances growing out of the slavery question, and in 1844 the Foreign Mission Board at Boston distinctly avowed that they could not and would not give an appointment to a slaveholder. Upon this the Virginia Foreign Mission Society issued a circular to southern Baptists calling a conference at Augusta, Ga.

The meeting was held on the Thursday before second Lord's day in May, 1845, and resulted in the organization of the Southern Baptist Convention, with a Foreign Mission Board located at Richmond, and a Domestic Mission Board located at Marion, Ala. The work of the Convention steadily grew in interest and importance, and none ever doubted the wisdom of a separate organization prior to the breaking out of the war. Since the war there has been, despite hard times, the most gratifying progress and a marked increase of liberality on the part of the churches. It will be gratifying to the Convention to learn from the report of the corresponding secretary (Rev. Dr. H. A. Tupper) that the Foreign Mission Board, located in this city, has received during the collection ever made during one year since ever seen. its organization.

each local church is an independent republic, and the highest "church court" known. The Convention has not met in Richmond since 1859, when there were some most exattracted a large delegation and excited great interest.

There will be present during the sessions of the body a number of nerthern visitors, who will be cordially welcomed and fraternally received. The Convention has again and again decided that it is impolitic even to discuss the question of reduion with the northern societies; but the delegates from with joy to welcome him back again to an either section are warmly welcomed at the meetings of the other, and there is the most fraternal intercourse between the two. There is every prospect of a large delega-tion and a deeply interesting session of the

In response, Dr. Curry, amidst the most rapturous applause, arose and delivered just such an address as might be expected on such an inspiring occasion.

Dr. W. E. Hatcher responded very happily to a toast "To Alma Mater." Long after midnight the speaking was still going on with great spirit. The occasion was in all respects a perfect success and reflects great credit upon the students of Richmond College.

PARADE AND TARGET-PRACTICE OF THE RICHMOND BLUES .- Yesterday the Richmond Light Infantry Blues celebrated their eighty-seventh anniversary by a parade and target-practice, and banquet at night. The company turned out thirty-five men rank and file, and presented a handsome appearance. In the afternoon the company visited Oakwood Cemetery, and assisted the ladies in decorating the graves of the soldiers there buried; after which they had a target contest for the company silver medal. Marker Charles Berry won the medal for the best shot, and Sergeant Henry Kell the leather medal as the worst shot. At night the company repaired to their armory, with honorary members and invited guests, and sat down to a handsome banquet. Among the old members of the Blues present were Colonel George Wythe Munford, Colonel J. L. Cary, George C. Wilde, J. H. Montague, J. J. White, and a number of others, besides a large number of invited friends of the company. The armory on this occasion was handsomely decorated with a great variety of flags. Police-Justice Joseph J. White presided at the table, and presented the medal to the winner, Commonwealth's Attorney E. Carrington Cabell Street R. L.TNE. 6 P. The officers of the Association were early on the ground superintending and directing, and by their admirable management seventh street between Canal and Byrd keeping everything in order, and preventing the confusion which otherwise would have resulted from the undirected labors of so many. By 12 o'clock the clouds had blown off and the sun shone out brightly, sixty-seven dollars to place granite flag-, and hundreds might be seen on the road wending their way to assist in the loving duty; and the stream of persons was continuous from that time until after 6. About 5 o'clock a severe storm of wind, rain, and Cay to M streets, as per profile of grade hall drove those who were on the grounds into the houses and carriages and under the trees for shelter. Those who were on the road sought shelter in the nearest house.

The shower, however, soon passed off, and gave all who wished to go an opportunity The Richmond Light Infantry Blues, unthe Normal-School building; also, to extend der command of Captain G. W. Jarvis,
